Gov. Clark Visits Wrangell

For a few minutes while the Humboldt was in port last night, Governor Clark was a visitor with us. The Governor is the same unassuming citizen he was on his first visit to our town last January, with his pleasant word of greeting and frank grasp of the hand. To the Sentinel man he told of his visit to the national capital, and was justly elated when he told of the great results he had obtained for the District, of the lights which will guide the mariner as he navigates Alaska's inland waters; the promise of a vessel to prospect the waters adjacent to the coast to investigate the deep sea fishing, and the appropriation of nearly a quarter of a million dollars for federal buildings in Juneau, etc.

He is now on his way up from Ketchikan en route down the Yukon River to Fairbanks and Nome, and as he had engaged passage on a steamer leaving Dawson on the 22nd, he didn't have time to stop off, much as he would have enjoyed so doing. At Ketchikan he spoke at a public meeting to over a hundred of the leading people of the community, and reports have it that his speech was well received and shed a lot of light on the rumors of unfairness on his part against recently removed Federal officials, demonstrating to the satisfaction of every body there that he had acted fairly, squarely and above board with the two men.

While here he was told of the reports circulated that he was responsible for the recently enacted law preventing the taking and sale of bear skins. Upon hearing of the report, he emphatically denied any connection with the law in any respect, saying, "I did not go to Washington to watch out or influence legislation, but at the request of the President and his advisors, to give them my opinion of the needs of the country, but you can rest assured that if I had been there for that purpose, the bill which you people are rightfully objecting to, would have had at least one voice raised against it."

Republican Nominee

"No," he said, "there is no political significance attached to my trip down the river. I have never been to the interior in an official capacity and am now going to go there so that I may know of their needs at first hand, from personal observation. Simply that, and nothing more. I hope that my next visit will be longer, so that it will be possible for me to meet all of your townspeople, and talk over conditions with them."

It's Another Daughter

The stork got busy at the Wrangell Hotel Monday night, or rather, Tuesday morning, when a baby girl was born to J. G. Grant and wife. The little lady is progressing finely and is rapidly making herself at home.

A Sunday Excursion

It is announced that the Duckland will take out an excursion next Sunday. It is hardly necessary to state that all those who go will have a first class time, as the Duckland's genial captain is noted as an entertainer and his personally conducted trips are well worth the taking in.

Shortage of Labor

A decided shortage of laborers exists in this region at the present time and matters in general are delayed as the result, reports to this effect coming in from every hand. So scarce are laborers in the local field that the sawmill was compelled to send below for help, and several hands arrived on the Cottage Tuesday morning.

The cessation of the Sock-eye run at the mouth of the river, will probably end the fishermen's strike,

The Political Situation

News from the upper country is to the effect that Ed. Orr, the Republican nominee for Delegate is out striving to win the office. He is now on his way down the Yukon, traveling on the same steamboat as his opponent, and is making friends and votes at every stop of the vessel. He is known personally or otherwise to practically everybody in the Interior, and he expects to so renew the old acquaintances that the victory of the ballots he is so confidently expecting will follow.

From Cordova comes the news that Dan Sutherland in his attempt to organize a Wickersham Club had secured a meager fifty names, and this in a town which will cast at least three hundred votes in the coming election. Evidently John Goodell is making good his promise at the convention to work just as hard for Ed. Orr as he would have done if he had been fortunate enough to secure the nomination himself.

At Fairbanks and on the nearby creeks, the voters know Wickersham and his schemes too well to tender him much support, and the emphatic need of making a showing at his home town is making Wickersham's friends sit up nights in their efforts to eradicate the memories of his misdeeds in the past. The Wickersham strength in the Tanana, if it ever existed, has been badly crippled, and with the Democrats lined up on the side of good government as represented by Mr. Orr, there is every probability that the major part of the nineteen hundred and odd votes which John Ronan captured as the Democratic standard bearer two years ago, will be cast this year for the Republican nominee, thus insuring the defeat of Wickersham. While he was in Juneau on his way inside, the latter part of last week, Wickersham was asked to explain his letter to the Guggenheim representative, Steve Birch.

A FINAL WORD

For the benefit of a certain individual of the town and at the risk of being branded as one of the Guggs hired men. The Sentinel publishes the following extract of a letter from President Taft to Governor Clark:

"In the absence of any action by the senate at this session on the nomination of Herbert L. Faulkner as marshal of the first division of Alaska, Mr. Faulkner will be continued in office under his present appointment by the district judge, which was made under the provisions of the federal statutes and the request of the attorney general. Believing thoroughly in the qualifications of the new marshal, he will receive the full confidence and support of the administration, and it is my intention to send his nomination to the senate again at the next session."

It is most sincerely to be hoped that this action on the part of the President will not precipitate the armed rebellion to be engineered by the above mentioned individual or the impeachment proceedings from the same source, as the coming winter promises to be a hard one, and Mr. Taft will probably not be able to hold on to his job."

It is several years since Wrangell has had as promising a future immediately confronting her as at present. There are more new buildings now in course of construction than at any time since the re-building period after the fire. Two new stores show how business is, and the probabilities are that fish will remain at top notch prices for at least a year. The mill will operate later than for several years. Then, and without a doubt the biggest and most important feature that has ever happened in the history of the town, is the construction of the paper and pulp mill at Crittenton Creek, which now seems assured. Talk about a glowing future, is there another place in the whole of the district that can beat us?

MERE REGRET

The paragraphs to be found below taken from the Fairbanks Times, are a portion of an editorial recently appearing in that paper. The trend of the article is along the lines of regret over the failure of Delegate Wickersham to obtain any results for Alaska. It is an unprejudiced holding up to view of a grave error the present incumbent of the office has made, but it is one that shows no resentment—it merely expresses regret of the class so many are expressing these days of our complicated troubles:

"The first real chance Alaska had for something big was in the Beveridge bill. It came through the executive department, and had the support of the administration and of the republican party in congress. In its amended form, congress might have passed it; but congress was not in a mood to spend much time on it, being eager to attend to important matters nearer home. A law for the better government of Alaska would not win a single vote for the member from Podunk. Therefore, upon the first show of opposition and lack of harmony among the Alaskans themselves, congress solved the problem very simply by shelving the entire business.

"For much of this opposition we hold the delegate to blame. In our judgment it was untimely, ill-advised and unintelligent. The Beveridge bill provided for a form of government which, while not ideal from the Alaskan point of view, would certainly be an improvement over present conditions. It was a first step toward the result desired. The delegate opposed it because 'the people of the territory elected their delegate overwhelmingly' upon a platform calling for an elective legislature, and any man so elected 'would be betraying the people of the territory if he acted to the contrary.'

"In our judgment, the delegate erred seriously in taking the territorial plank of his platform too literally. The delegate was not instructed by an 'overwhelming' vote; he received fewer than forty per cent of the total vote cast. In the second place, there was nothing in the platform that instructed him to refuse anything less than an elective territorial legislature."

OLD-FASHIONED ROSES

Th' aint no style about 'em,
And they're sort of pale and faded.
At the doorway here, without 'em
Would be Jonesy, and shaded
With a good 'ol blacker shadder
Than the morning-glories makes
And the sunshine would look sadder
For their good old-fashioned sakes.
I like 'em 'cause they kind o'
Sort o' make a feller like 'em!
And I tell you when I find a
Bunch out whut the sun kin strike 'em
It allus sets me thinkin'
O' the ones that used to grow
An' peek in thro' the chinkin'
O' the cabin, don't you know!
And then I think o' mother
And how she used to love 'em—
When they wuzn't any other,
Less she found 'em above 'em!
And her eyes, afore she shut 'em,
Whispered a smile and said,
We must pick a bunch and put 'em
In her hand when she wuz dead.
But, as I was sayin'
They ain no style about 'em
Very gaudy 'ol displayin'.
But I wouldn't be without 'em—
'Cause I'm happier in these posies,
And the hollyhaws and sich,
Than the hummin'-bird 'at noses
In the roses of the rich.
—James Whitcomb Riley.

Tuesday Was Steamer Day

Tuesday of this week was a busy day at the local wharf. The Cottage City was an early morning caller on her way north, leaving considerable freight. Then, before the greater number of us had gotten up, the Queen with close to two hundred tourists aboard, put in an appearance, staying until eleven. In the afternoon the Princess Royal arrived with freight for up river points and remained until Wednesday morning. It was unfortunate that the weather was so bad that many of the passengers on the vessels were afraid to venture forth to see the town.

The Alaska with the Garnet in tow arrived from the north during the night Sunday, and will probably be out of commission for the next month or six weeks.

School Teachers Secured

The school board was in receipt of word this week that Miss Eunice Cowels and Miss Katherine Byron had accepted the positions as teachers in the local school for the ensuing year, the former as principal the latter to have charge of the lower grades. Both the ladies come with the best of recommendations, and a successful year is confidently expected.

(Concluded from First Page)

but was in such a big hurry to go somewhere that he didn't have time to shed any light on the subject, and by his action and the acknowledgement of his personal organ, the Juneau Dispatch, he is before the people of Alaska as opposed to an association of men developing this country, BECAUSE THEY REFUSED TO BE BLACKMAILED INTO GIVING HIM A POSITION IN THEIR SERVICE. And the Dispatch says that it was simply a business proposition. Of course it was, the kind of business he is looking for and trying to use the whole of the people of Alaska as a catspaw to get for him.

The Sentinel's editor has been very busy this last week keeping an eye on Kenig Johanson, who has been trying to persuade the "devil" to put something in the paper on the boss, in the gasboat line. We are of the opinion that a gasboat is enough to keep a man awake nights, especially an editor. And what's the use of being editor anyway, if one cannot suppress news about oneself.
